PROBLEMS Of The HEART

DEAR MRS. THOMPSON: (1) I will be next April. Will I be old enough to do up my hair? I wouldn't put it high, of course—only on my neck.

(2) I live in a college town. How soon will I be old enough to go to dances? Could I go to fraternity dances before the big prom?

(3) I have met several boys whom I like very well. How can I have them like me? And how can I tell if they do like me?

(4) My hair is light, but I think it is getting darker. What can I do to keep it light?

(5) Am I old enough to wear my dresses to my shoe tops or to wear spats for dressy occasions?

AN INTERESTED READER:
(1) When you are 16 you will be old enough to do up your hair.

(2) You will not be old enough to go to any college dances until you are eighteen. I think it would be better to start with fraternity dances and then go to proms.

(3) Be pleasant, interesting and dress as well as you can, and the boys ought to like you. A good personality and character are most important. If the boys want to come to see you and ask to take you places, they like you.

(4) Put a teaspoonful of borax in the rinse water when you wash your hair.

(5) Whether you are old enough to wear your dresses to your shoe tops depends upon your size. You can tell yourself if they look well that long. Spats are more for street wear than dress.

VENEZUELAN CONSUL TO ESTABLISH OFFICE HERE

Do you want a clear skin?

If your skin is not fresh, smooth and glowing, or has suffered from an unwise use of cosmetics, here is an easy, inexpensive way to clear it:

Spread on a little Resinol Ointment, letting it remain for ten minutes. Then wash off with Resinol Soap and hot water. Finish with a dash of clear, cold water to close the pores. Do this regularly, once a day, and see if it does not quickly soothe and cleanse the pores, lessen the tendency to pimples, and leave the complexion clear, fresh and velvety. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For samples of each, free, write to Dept. B.R., Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SUPERMEN STRUGGLE FOR PEACE, WARDALL ASSERTS

Theosophic Lecturer Disagrees With Celebrated German Philosopher.

Speaking last night on "The Real Superman," Max Wardall of Seattle said in his lecture at the Lee-Hookins hotel that Von Bernhardi was wrong when he said war was the basis of all healthy development—that struggle is not merely the destructive but life giving principle and that might is right. It is only where the instinct of self preservation runs counter to the law of love that war comes about, Wardall said.

Human beings were intended to live in a state of brotherly tolerance and regard, and civilization will prove it before many years have passed away, he asserted. Sir Oliver Lodge, the greatest living scientist of the day, asserts that "we are surrounded by invisible intelligences, who are embodiments of love and wisdom, who are constantly striving to bring men to the ideal of brotherly regard and altruism."

These great beings are perfected men of our race who have evolved beyond the fighting stage and seek only the good of all, said Mr. Wardall.

These are the real supermen, sometimes called adepts, masters or divine men; they live in seclusion, but constantly are working for the welfare of the human race; when the world is reduced to a point where it believes in these masters they will take a yet more active part in human affairs, Mr. Wardall claimed.

"Esoteric Christianity" will be the subject of Mr. Wardall's last lecture tonight at 8 o'clock.

ENGLAND AND GERMANY DROP SUMMER TIME

Both Countries Uncertain Whether to Repeat Daylight Saving Plan.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The "summer time" calendar closes today, the last day on which the clocks will register time an hour ahead of the standard. Greenwich time will be restored at 3 o'clock tomorrow morning. The daylight saving plan introduced last spring by an act of parliament, is generally held to have proved a success even the farmers who at first objected to it having become reconciled. However, the government has appointed a committee to consider the results and report whether it is advisable to repeat the experiment.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—Germany will return to normal time at midnight tonight when all the time pieces in the country will be moved back one hour.

Opinions vary greatly regarding the advantage of the so-called summer time. Farmers are opposed to it, as also are the moving picture interests, while some theaters and commercial classes favor it. It is uncertain whether the experiment will be renewed next year.

J. P. MORGAN ALMOST VIOLATED LAW; ASKED MODIFIED WAR RULES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Did J. P. Morgan and the other bankers and business men, who conferred with Sir Richard Crawford this week, violate a federal statute, and are they liable to three years' imprisonment?

Those questions have been seriously considered by the state department.

A section of the statutes makes it a crime for any citizen to carry on (except through the state department) any negotiations with the agent of a foreign government "in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States."

It was declared, however, that the American business men were not seeking "redress from an injury," but were seeking to have the British restrictions modified.

It is said there is no intention to apply the law in this instance.

"Did you get the letter I wrote you while you were in camp?" asked Tommy. "I did," said his father, "but a long time after you wrote it. It takes me a long time to get around to the camp. The postoffice at El Paso was big enough before the soldiers came, but now that the population has doubled things are somewhat tangled."

"Why do you suppose that Uncle Ben didn't answer my letter?" asked the youngster.

"Probably he would have," said his father, "if he had the time and —"

Kentuckians Must Vote 'er Straight or Miss Primaries

FRANKFORD, Ky., Sept. 30.—Kentucky voters hereafter will be forced to observe a strict party regularity if they wish to take part in primaries at which candidates of their party are nominated, according to a decision handed down today by the Kentucky court of appeals.

The court ruled in connection with an election case brought before it from a lower court, that a voter casting his ballot against any one of his party's candidates at an election forfeited his right to take effect in his succeeding primary.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

If I could have laughed at anything Dicky's appearance as he protested against his mother's proposal would have brought a smile to my lips. He was so like a ruffled young turkey cock when he heard her plan to have me go back to teaching while she took charge of the home!

But I was in no mood for laughter. There must be something very primitive under the veneer in me. I felt as savagely resentful of the plan to force me from my position as chaperone of our little home as any cave woman would have felt if her domain were threatened.

This, then, was the meaning of my mother-in-law's smiling approval of my club work! She had had this in mind ever since she knew she had to live with us! In her daughter's home she had always held the reins of the household, because her daughter wished to devote herself to her husband, a busy, brilliant surgeon, and to her own pursuits.

But it was one thing, I told myself fiercely, to give up the management of one's home to one's own mother, and a far different affair to hand over one's cherished prerogative to a perfect stranger. I knew the arrogance of the woman who asked it also. If she ever took command of the household affairs I would have no more right to alter the position of a chair, or to bring home a guest to dinner without permission than I would if I did not belong in the house.

It was intolerable that she should ask this thing. I realized it as a danger to be faced, for I knew the persistence of Dicky's mother once she had set her heart upon anything.

A Diplomatic Reply

All the kindly feelings which my mother-in-law's illness and softened manner had wrought in me vanished, and my early prejudices against her returned. I took a sudden resolve that I would be as cold, as cratty, as determined as she was, but that to her arrogance I would oppose smiling diplomacy.

So I smiled lovingly at Dicky, who looked as if he were still inwardly sputtering, and said lightly:

"As Mother Graham is barely convalescent, and I could not get my position back before next fall, don't you think we'd better postpone this discussion for a while? Tell me instead when Katie will sound that tocsin of the soul, the dinner bell. I'm ravenously hungry."

"That is because you didn't eat anything this noon," Dicky returned, palpable relief at the diversion in his tones. "Here comes Katie now."

"Oh! Missis Graham, dinner him all on the table! I mean dot dinner, him is served," Katie giggled in confusion, as she generally does when she tries to announce a meal properly, and vanished.

"That girl needs an iron hand over her," my mother-in-law commented acidly. "Imagine one of Harriet's maids announcing a meal in that way!"

"Oh, please cut it out, mother," Dicky returned irritably. "Don't you realize that we've all been so busy with your illness that nobody has paid any attention to anything so trivial as the way a maid announces dinner?"

He had come around where I was standing, and he slipped his arm around me as he spoke. I put my arm up behind my back, clasped his and gave it an ecstatic little squeeze. It seemed so blissful to have Dicky defending me that his mother's unpleasantness faded into nothingness.

Fortified by the remembrance of my loving clasp, I was able to turn aside with good humor all the petty pin pricks which his mother gave me during the dinner. She was in one of her most captious moods. Everything which came on the table, every movement of Katie's, even the arrangement of the flowers which I had bought to celebrate her first meal in the dining room
